

TEAMWORK

Positive team relationships help create organizations that are productive.

As a team leader it's up to you to build team relationships that help your group meet their goals and objectives and to work as one cohesive unit.

Here are some tips for teamwork:

1. Trust your teammates. Stand by one another when issues or mistakes arise.
2. Show up, own your work, and do it to the best of your abilities. This builds trust.
3. Recognize and respect the efforts and ideas of others. With this, it is also important to give credit where credit is due.
4. Always communicate. Never presume a colleague or customer understands what you're planning, or the work you've done.
5. Recognize the skills and talents of your teammates and use them to further your project.
6. Divide the tasks proportionately among team members. Understand where there is overlap and plan ahead to work together.
